Transcript: Library to Go

Lynda Kellam: "Library to Go" is about trying to understand who our patrons are outside of the campus and what we can do for them.

We have lots of services. We have e-books, tutorials online that you can go in and learn how to use a database. We have librarians that are on chat, we have people who you can get in touch with at all times of the day. We have a huge checkout service so you can get an ipad, get a laptop, you can check out the T1 calculators, and a lot of different things. So it's definitely a great service and if you need to keep it, you can renew it for one time. Chat is the most popular thing we have, people love to chat with us. And sometimes they're students who are on campus and sometimes they're students who are far, far away. But people love to come in and chat and get help that way. We can help students with basic things like citations if they just want to learn how to cite something. We can help students with more advanced resources so if they need five articles for a research paper we can help them with that. We have all the things you need to be able to do the research you have to do for your classes. And you're going to write a better paper, you're going to do better research if you actually use the library and use the people who are here to help you.
