The University Libraries of The University of North Carolina at Greensboro (UNCG) is pleased to announce a new web portal that connects several new and existing online collections related to the history of UNCG and makes over 3200 photographs, documents, and publications available to the public.

The University History Collections website (http://libcdm1.uncg.edu/history.php) provides a searchable and browsable interface to the following collections held by the Martha Blakeney Hodges Special Collections and University Archives:

- The Carolinian (student newspaper), 1919-1930
- Coraddi and State Normal Magazine (literary and arts magazine), 1897-1999
- Oral History Collections
- Textiles and Artifacts
- University Images and Documents
- University Yearbooks Collection, 1902-1993

Additions planned for the coming year include the remaining issues of The Carolinian from 1930-present, several hundred new photographs and documents, dozens of oral histories, and a collection of yearbooks published by the Curry School, a teacher training school operated by the UNCG School of Education until 1969.

The University Yearbooks Collection was digitized through the facilities of the North Carolina Digital Heritage Center. Alumnae News and Alumni News, The Carolinian, Coraddi, and State Normal Magazine were digitized through the Lyrasis Mass Digitization Program supported by a grant from the Sloan Foundation.

For more information, please contact David Gwynn, Digital Projects Coordinator at jdgwynn@uncg.edu, or Hermann Trojanowski, Special Projects Archivist at hjtrojan@uncg.edu.